West Paris voters to decide on future of town's solid waste

West Paris residents will be asked at a Jan. 14 special town meeting to approve the concept of sending the town's trash to Auburn for incineration in that city's incineration / steam generation plant.

Although the City of Auburn, which owns and operates the plant, hasn't approved the West Paris Board of Selectmen's application to send the town's trash there, the application is on the city manager's desk. And City Manager Charles Morrison told The Citizen that the West Paris application is "on the top of the waiting list."

The incinerator has proven a popular alternative for area towns caught between overloaded dump sites and the state Department of Environmental Protection regulations restricting the placements of new sites.

There are already 27 towns sending their solid waste to the Auburn incinerator, Mr. Morrison said, and a dozen more are on the waiting list. "We try to be as accommodating as possible," he said, but problems with the operation and management of the plant have slowed down the rate at which new trash can be accepted. Currently the plant, built in 1981 at a cost of $4.4 million accepts 200 tons of trash daily.

Most recently, in November, the towns of Woodstock and Greenwood began sending their solid waste to the plant, the steam from which is used in the manufacturing operations of Pioneer Plastics.

1984 TIMBER SALES MUST BE REPORTED TO DIRECTOR OF BUREAU OF FORESTRY

Robert Umberger, Taxation Forester for the Maine Forest Service, reminds forest landowners that 1984 timber sales must be reported to the Director of the Bureau of Forestry by Jan. 31, 1985.

The reports are required for all stumpage sales including stumpage cut by owners for their own business use. The annual report is not required of landowners who have cut timber exclusively for personal use, or for roadside sales.

Report forms are available at town offices from the Maine Forest Service, Station #22, Augusta, Maine 04333.

RAILROADIANA DONOR TO BE HONORED

Mrs. Annie Crockett of Bryant Pond will be honored at the January meeting of the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Crockett has purchased through the Annie and Robert Crockett Trust the railroadiana models and artifacts in the Ed Quinn collection. It is hoped that the collection will be the foundation of a permanent railroad museum in Bethel. Charles Chiaro, founder and director of the Owls Head Transportation Museum in Owls Head, Maine, will present a lecture and slide show Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, at 7 p.m. at the Bethel Inn. The topic will be community museum development. His talk is sponsored by the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce. All interested citizens, railroad buffs and chamber members are urged to attend to both honor Crockett and learn more about the museum project.

DECISION ANNOUNCED ON HOLIDAY LIGHTING CONTEST

After hours of serious deliberation and careful assessment the judges have reached a decision on the winners of the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce Christmas decorating contest. They have decided that the real winner was the entire Bethel area. They did their judging on a night when freshly fallen snow covered the area and reported that there were many beautifully decorated homes and reaching a decision was difficult. With a town decorated as nicely as ours was this year there are no losers, everyone wins.

Since it was impossible to award prizes to everyone who decorated, the judges narrowed it down and were able to pick some winners. They based their decision on creativity and overall appeal, not necessarily on number of lights. First prize in the business category went to Rostay Motor Inn, second prize to Douglass Bed and Breakfast. Residential category was more difficult with the judges deciding on a tie between Bud and Shirley Clough and Arlan and Eleanor Jodrey.

For their efforts the winners will be treated to a unique fun-filled dinner at the King's Inn in Mason, courtesy of Mac and Bunny MacMunn. Details of the dinner will be given to the winners shortly.

The chamber would like to thank all those who decorated for making the Bethel area a special place to be this holiday season. Let's do it again next year. Happy New Year!

Woodstock board names Ken Koskela road commissioner

The Town of Woodstock has a new road commissioner this week to replace Roger Benson, who resigned last week. The Board of Selectmen, Sunday night, appointed Ken Koskela to serve the unexpired portion of Mr. Benson's term of office, until March town meeting.

Selectman Cliff York explained that the board decided to appoint a road commissioner instead of calling a special town meeting to elect one because it would have taken three weeks to advertise and hold the special town meeting and a commissioner was needed immediately.

Selectman York said he had asked road department employee Joe Campbell if he would be willing to serve as commissioner for a few weeks if a special town meeting were called to select a new commissioner. Mr. Campbell said he didn't want the job, even for a few weeks, Mr. York reported. He explained that the number of complaints the road commissioner has to deal with limits the number of people willing to seek the position.

Three men were interviewed for the commissioner's post by the selectmen: Mr. Koskela, of Woodstock, John Cox, of Woodstock, and Morris Hadley, of South

NEW BUILDING PROJECTS BEING DISCUSSED AT SKIWAY

Sometime in the future additional condominiums, plus stores and restaurants may be added to the recent developments at Sunday River Ski Resort. But, owner Les Otten cautions, "It's all talk."

Among the projects being discussed, he says, are a take-out restaurant called Gourmet-to-Go and a fast food restaurant called Mr. Potato. The Bethel Savings Bank, he says, is particularly interested in putting up a building to house various shops and eateries.

Savings Bank director Steve Wight, who is also chairman of the Newry Board of Selectmen, informed that board last Friday of the various projects being talked of for future Sunday River expansion. Sunday River Ski Resort is already Newry's single largest taxpayer, and will soon account for more than half of taxes paid in Newry.

Owner Les Otten told The Citizen the only project for which drawings exist is a 128-unit condominium building. "I would like to build another building," he said, but added there is no timetable for bringing the rough sketches to reality.

As for the other projects — the commercial building, condos being built by outside developers, fast-food restaurants and take-out restaurants, there are no plans, he said. "There's a lot of speculation."

JAMPACKED: Sunday River Ski Resort's parking lots and slopes were filled this past weekend, and a lot of business trickled down to merchants in Bethel.

Sunday River skiers bring joy, and business, to area establishments

More than water was trickling down from the ski slopes over the Christmas/New Year's vacation week. Dollars were flowing into local business coffers as a record number of skiers flocked to Sunday River.

As Edelweiss owner Dick Waterhouse put it, "Somebody's doing something right—whether it's Mother Nature or Les Otten."

Sunday River Ski Resort owner Otten was willing to take some of the credit. "We paid attention to business," said Mr. Otten. "We made snow whenever we could. When it snowed two feet in early December, there was a great temptation to save bucks and coast. We didn't."

As a result of Sunday River's aggressive snow-making policy, the skiway had the only half-decent snow in the Maine/New Hampshire area following the week end thaw. Skiers were flooding the area from Saddleback and Wildcat, where slopes went bare early in the weekend.

Sunday's River's marketing director Wende Gray noted, "Sunday was a record. We probably had the worst conditions of the season and the most people ever." Ms. Gray estimated the crowd at 2,500 that day, up from the previous all-time high of 2,300. The reason was, she said, "It was just about the only skiing left in New England."

It was not just the warm rain of last week that killed the skiing on most slopes, but also the temperature inversion on Saturday, during which the higher mountains had temperatures in the 50s on the mountaintops. With its lower elevation, the skiway kept a good portion of its snow cover.

At Mt. Abram, the rain, the temperature inversion, and heavy usage Saturday left lots of bare spots Sunday, and the skiers were sparse, except on the lower slopes. Tuesday's storm, however, quickly covered up the brown spots, and spokeswoman Jean Anton exulted, "We're back in business."

For most local innkeepers and restaurant owners, the business never quit.

"I think this is the biggest weekend we've had ever," said Sue O'Donnell owner of Mothers' Restaurant. "It beat Mollyockett Day. I wish it would go this way all winter long."

"It was the best Saturday I think we've ever had," said Hugh Chapman, manager of the Bethel IGA

Newry voters to decide access road streetlight question

Newry's Board of Selectmen will have voters decide whether the town should have Central Maine Power install four streetlights on the Sunday River Ski Resort access road—from Sunday River Road to the skiway. The cost is estimated at approximately $16 per light per month.

The proposal was placed on the town meeting warrant by the Newry selectmen at their meeting last Friday. Town meeting will take place March 4, 7 p.m. at the Raymond C. Foster School building.

Following the town meeting, the building may no longer be the Raymond C. Foster School. One article of the warrant proposes changing the name of the building to the Raymond F. Foster Municipal Building, since the structure is now, in effect, the town office. It was turned over to the town last fall by SAD 44, since it was no longer being used as a school.

Holding the town meeting in the new municipal building, instead of in the Grange Hall, will serve to inaugurate it as the town office, the majority of the selectmen felt.

Voters will also be asked to approve a budget change, eliminating the two existing Raymond C. Foster building accounts and setting up a single account for repair and furnishings. The two items have been carried under separate accounts with separate allotments.

The repair budget had contained $10,000 for putting on a new roof. The new roof is now up and only $9,450 was expended—and that included a general cleaning of the building.

The furnishings account contained $2,000. Only $80 of that has been spent—on a conference table for the selectmen.

In other business, the selectmen decided to reject the opinion of their auditor who informed them it was against federal guidelines to expend monies from budget accounts in the two months of the new year prior to town meeting.

SNOW TWISTERS TO MEET

Bethel Snow Twisters will meet Tuesday, Jan. 8, at 7 p.m. at the Casco Bank community room. New members and non-members welcome.

Telstar boys lose 3, gals go 1-and-1 in vacation-break tilts

The Telstar boys' basketball team got no Christmas presents from Santa over the holiday break. In fact, with three losses in a row over the school vacation, the Rebels were possibly looking for the Grinch who stole Christmas cheer from them.

On the other hand, the girls' squad braved icy roads to travel to Gorham, N.H., for the Gorham High School Christmas Tourney and wound up notching a win in the preliminary round before bowing to host Gorham in the championship round.

For the boys, the three losses brought their season record down to 3-6, and Coach Bill Caddigan says they've got to begin scoring more points if they're to win more ball games. "We haven't generated any offense," he said. "You can't win games with 50 points."

To bolster his contention, there are the scores of the past week's games: versus Carrabec last Thursday ti was 80-47, against Gorham (in the Christmas tourney) it was 53-49, and against Raymond (in the consolation round of that tournament) it was 62-43, with Telstar on the below-50 side of each match-up.

On the other hand, Coach Caddigan likes the way some of his players are maturing. He had high praise for sophomore Scott Haines following the closely fought game with Gorham last Friday in New Hampshire. "Scott Haines had a great game," the coach enthused. "He basically carried the team."

Haines had 21 points, of the Rebels' 49: nine field goals and three free throws.

Also coming in for praise following the Gorham game were the subs, who normally play JV ball. Following a collision between Jim Fiske and Ken Viger, which left Viger with a mild concussion, and foul problems for Gary Roshto, the coach put in Alec Newell at center and used other JVs in various parts of his battered squad. "They kept us in the game," he said of the reserves. Subs also had to fill in for Bernie Haines, who couldn't make the trip because of stomach flu.

Scott Haines also proved his worth in the consolation round game against Raymond. He was high scorer with 13 (five field goals and three free throws), Ga-

Oh the beautiful first fluffy snow reminds me, a Senior Citizen, of the good old skiing days. So instead of reminiscing I dug out my cross country skiis, called my senior citizen friend and within an hour we were on our way, she away ahead as usual listening to the wood creatures. She likes the curves in the trail, but sometimes I straighten out a few. Always thankful Akers Ski Shop has plenty of cross country reinforcements. What a lovely trip, the squirrels, chipmunks chattering away. My friends likes them so chatters back at them, I save my breath for poling along. Then my friend's cats appeared on the trail as we neared home and decided their feet were cold and we should carry them.It was rather tricky with two big cats on your shoulders to make it along but we did. Next time we'll be in better shape and hopefully the cats will stay home.

Upton

— Mrs. Arline Bernier, Corres. —

Upton residents are invited to a cookie tasting party and a New Year's Gift Exchange Wednesday, Jan. 9, at the Ladies' Aid Building. Each is asked to bring a wrapped gift and a dozen favorite cookies.

The Berniers and Bergerons attended a holiday party at the home of Andre Bernier in Locke Mills Saturday night.

Several in the area have had various illness and infections. The yo-yo weather has been blamed.

A gentleman from Newry, and his rabbit hunting partner, went off the slippery road in Grafton. He had hiked over half the distance home for a 4-wheel drive vehicle when we met him in the heavy fog and were able to shorten the rest of his trip.

The cosmetic party at Bergerons had a very small attendance. The Christmas Eve program at church suffered the same fate.

Church services began again Dec. 30 after a few Sundays canceled due to road conditions, illness, and the holiday.

Our short cold spell turned rapidly into a heat wave with rain. We lost most of our snow cover and now have patchy, crusty snow and frozen ruts in the road typical of April.

LOCAL BUSINESSES

store. "We weren't expecting the type of business we got," he said, noting that the store ran out of some items when deliveries were delayed.

And it wasn't just a one-day binge. "Even with a day off (for being closed on Christmas Day) it was one of the best weeks ever,' said Mr. Chapman. The out-of-town customers were not just buying sandwiches and six-packs to go, either. "I have a feeling there were a lot of condo owners. They buy the more expensive products—like steak instead of hamburger."

When the IGA closed, Prim's picked up the slack. "It was unreal," commented manager Ann Patten. "The girls were going crazy."

Next door to Prim's, at the Edelweiss, owner Dick Waterhouse termed business "Fantastic. Absolutely fantastic. Double of what it was last year. We've never seen so many skiers."

The skiers mostlly stayed over for two or three days, according to local innkeepers. Ms. Gray of the skiway, estimated 1,500 people stayed in the area each night. All condo units on the mountain were filled and reservation clerks at the skiway wer sending the overflow as far away as The Madison in Rumford and the Mollyockett Motel in West Paris.

But first, skiway personnel were recommending local inns that were reporting vacancies. The Chapman Inn was one such. Owner Robin Zinchuk said her rooms were all filled at the beginning of the weekend, but her guests left when the skiing turned out to be marginal. "After the rain of Friday, they went home Saturday." She called Joan Putnam at the skiway's reservations desk and let her know she had unexpected vacancies. By Saturday night her rooms were "almost full again."

"I can't thank them enough for what they've done for me," Ms. Zinchuk said.

Other inns and bed-and-breakfast homes, such as Rostay and Douglass', reported similar experiences.

Cheri Thurston, at the Sudbury Inn said, "We had a great weekend ..(and) a record number of dinners on Saturday night. It was up a lot over last season."

Ms. Thurston remarked that about 50% of her guests were cross-country skiers. "I was surprised at how many people we got that do cross-country."

The owners of the Sunday River Inn and Ski Touring Center were both surprised and delighted. Peggy Wight remarked about Sunday's turnout: "Everybody was here ... We were drawing people from other places. We were fortunate—we maintained snow cover on the trails."

Up the road from the ski touring center, D.W. McKeen's lodge and restaurant was filled to capacity with diners, drinkers and lodgers.

Even skiers who came up to do downhill wound up on the skinny skis. Sudbury Inn's Thurston remarked that many of her guests came equipped with both types, so they could go wherever the snow was better. And Edelweiss' Waterhouse, who had two families staying in his apartments above the store, said they gave up on the downhill slopes and went to the Bethel Inn Touring Center, where they rented equipment and "had a great time."

Bethel Inn owner Dick Rasor said his establishment had a great time, not just for the week but for the year. It was the inn's best year ever, he said, noting that the porfits are being plowed back into the establishment in the continuing effort to upgrade the facilities.

Visitors who stayed in the area also shopped in the area. Garret Bonnema, of Bonnema Potters said, "We had a real good weekend—a little better than last year." Much of the reason, he said, was the poor skiing conditions. "On Sunday, when skiing was so bad, people stayed in town."

Sam Westleigh, of Westleigh's Service Station, noted an increase in the gasoline business, but said, "It's not like it is in the summertime." Judging by the addresses on his credit card receipts, visitors were in town from all over NewEngland , but with a preponderance of cars from Massachusetts.

While most local merchants were blessing the skiway as they toted up their receipts this week, there were some dissenting opinions. Ruth Grover, for one, owner of The Brass Buckle/The Fashion Basket, felt that skiers wouldn't help her business, or downtown retail merchants generally.

Yet even someone like Carolyn Bachelder, of Roberts Poultry Farm, can see an economic boom on the mountain trickling down to her business. She figures that those who stay in condos will be buying eggs, and those who stay at inns will be eating breakfasts and the inn owners will be buying eggs. Either way, she expects to sell more eggs.

And Nancy Lincoln at Western Maine Supply is predicting a building boom next year, "if interest rates stay low." She notes that Western Maine Supply has supplied most of the materials for the Sunday River expansion and also notes that local carpenters "are working flat out" as a result of that expansion, in addition to the rest of the construction going on in the area.

NEWS FROM ADULT AND COMMUNITY EDUCATION

The Winter Term of the SAD 44 Adult and Community Education program will feature a selection of Cabin Fever Specials—one session workshop classes—as well as an increased number of short courses for 1985. Director Cathy Newell is pleased with the selection, and with the number of individuals who offered suggestions for courses and programs to be included in the schedule. "While the Advisory Council and the Adult and Community Education staff work hard to come up with courses and programs that will please residents of our area, it is a special bonus when friends in the SAD 44 communities help out with suggestions for courses or by identifying people who might be interested in teaching."

The Winter Term courses and programs will be advertised in a flyer to be sent to all boxholders and rural route addresses in SAD 44 within the next week. Registrations will be accepted by mail, phone or in person at the SAD 44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780 during the week of Jan. 7, with the term beginning on Jan. 14. Short courses will include Stained Glass, Writing, Making Padded Sewing Boxes, Lifted Radiant Star, Breadmaking, Income Tax Preparation and Tax Changes for 1984, Beginning Drawing, Landscaping and Fruit Trees, Apple-Users Group, Community Band and Chorus, Women in Mythology, and additional topics to be listed in the flyer. Cabin Fever Special Topics will include Furniture Refinishing, Counted Cross-Stitch, Cut and Pierce Lampshade, Cornhusk Wreaths, Wearable Art, Introduction to Western Maine Architecture, Alzheimers Disease and Problems of Aging, and additional topics to be included in the flyer.

Adult High School diploma classes will begin for the second term on Jan. 21, with classes planned in English, Algebra Refresher Math, and U.S. History. GED Preparation and testing is available on Tuesday nights in Bryant Pond and at Telstar, with other times by appointment. Any adult who would like more information about high school diploma or GED programs should contact Cathy Newell at the Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780.

WOODSTOCK BOARD

Paris. Mr. Koskela was selected because he had both mechanical know-how and experience with maintaining roads. He had been the Woodstock road commissioner between 1979 and 1982.

Mr. Koskela was on the job early Monday morning and said things hadn't changed much since he left the road department two years ago. (He has been working for the Greenwood road department since.) He was optimistic about his future as the new Woodstock road commissioner, "If things go well, I plan to run for it (at town meeting)," he said.

Selectman York informed his board that Lee Oliver, who had lost out on a request by the Town of Peru at last month's special town meeting to have the Town of Woodstock pay for plowing his road, turned in a bill to the town for work on the Woodstock road leading to his home in West Peru.

Mr. Oliver turned in a bill for, as he stated, "maintenance and emergency repairs to maintain the Concord Pond Road from the Peru town line." The distance of road he has been maintaining on his own is about 2,100 feet, he said in his Dec. 21 letter to the selectmen.

Among the expenses he claimed are $250 for work on last April's washouts, $170.34 for a temporary culvert, and $550 for plowing and sanding last winter. The total bill comes to $1,120.34.

Selectman Frank Bean commented, "Since it's legally closed, how can we pay to plow a road that's closed?"

Selectman York said his board would decline to pay the bill and would inform Mr. Oliver of that decision. "His only recourse is to take it to the courts, and maybe that's where it belongs."

TELSTAR'S LYNN SEAMES goes up for a jump ball in recent hard court action.

WEST BETHEL

Children's Center

The center children had a lovely Christmas celebration thanks to the kind support of many local organizations, individuals, and businesses. Senior Citizen group donated their time and energy in making beautiful warm mittens for all. Rotary Club donated $50 toward book gifts for the children. Groan and McGurn Video donated the movie "SnowMan" plus TV and VCR for the special enjoyment of all. Bob's Corner Store donated candy canes, and Prim's Pharmacy, bags for gifts. Tony Chapman donated a magnificent Christmas tree and Bob Grover himself as the center's real and magic Santa. A very special thank-you to you all. The children's pleasure and excitement brought the spirit of Christmas in everyone's heart!

The center parent group is to be commended on their fun raising efforts. They have reached their goal of $500, which will go to help pay for the center's utility bills. Helen Cummings of Bethel was awarded the sweater, and Pat Angevine of Bethel won the Care Bear. Thanks to all who showed their support of the center.

Oxford County Community Services is continuing to expand Children Services programs and will be opening two new Head Start Centers in Oxford and Rumford in mid-January. Katina Colombotos has left her teaching position at West Bethel to accept the position of head teacher at the new Oxford Center. Katina is an excellent teacher and will be missed by staff, children, and parents in West Bethel. The center is pleased to announce that Cindy Mills of West Bethel has been hired as a teacher aide in a full-time position with the staff. Cindy has been actively involved with the center for the past two years. She has volunteered regularly, work in a part-time teacher aide training program, and recently as a special resource aide to the classroom. Cindy is the mother of two children and has also been very active in the parent group.

The two pre-school programs, Day Care and Head Start, have benefited a lot from the solid support of parents and the community. Another special thank you goes out to the Bethel Cub Scout group that donated their handmade doll house to the center. The children love it! On behalf of the children, staff wishes all a very healthy and happy New Year! Anyone interested in seeing or getting more information about the programs—please call the Center any time between 6:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 836-3700.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Saturday before Christmas, I went to the little Newry Community Church's Party. It was a great enjoyment to see and meet all the friendly people who came to participate in the purogram put on by Sue Wight, Susan Bowie and the family of Pastor Hanscom and all the others who contribuated their time and money to make it such a pleasant evening.

The children were adorable in presenting the event of the Wise Men and the Angels. The Mary and Joseph tableau was inspiring. Marcia Moxcey told us about Peace on Earth. Hymns were sung. Apples were passed around besides popcorn and gifts to the children of the community.

Later we were all invited to the Swan Club Room for refreshments served by the Hanscom family.

It was really refreshing and peaceful compared with all the turmoil happening all over the world.

May God Bless and keep everyone at Peace.

NEWRY VOTERS TO DECIDE

The town's fiscal year is the same as the calendar year, ending on Dec. 31. That means no funds are appropriated to meet budget needs for the months of January and February. New funding does not take place until March, at town meeting.

The town has traditionally kept money in the budget as unexpended budgets of the various departments and continued to pay bills from those accounts. This, the audirtor said, is contrary to federal guidelines. The selectmen agreed that it is, in reality, spending money that has not been appropriated, and there is the far-fetched possibility that town meeting voters could simply veto any appropriations made during January and February.

Neverthless, the selectmen agreed to continue the practice, not seeing any alternative, as long as the fiscal year ends before town meeting. And Selectman Roger Hanscom didn't think much of the federal guidelines to begin with. "We can keep in the black and they can't. If they can't take care of their own affairs, they shouldn't be telling us how to handle ours."

The town is well in the black, the selectmen will report to the town at the annual meeting. Selectman Lee Swan told his fellow board members, "All our accounts are looking good this year."

And board chairman Steve Wight said he expects another $5 million of valuation on the tax rolls this spring, reflecting the new construction at the Sunday River Ski Resort. That will bring total real estate valuation in the town to $15 million, he said.

As of last year, when real estate valuation was $10.6 million, Sunday River accounted for 33.5% of that amount.

The selctmen will meet this Friday to finalize the budget. The warrant will remain open until Jan. 14.

Groan & McGurn keeps on growing

With yet another new Tourist Trap and Video Store just opened in downtown Bethel, Groan & McGurn partner Eric Paul (his wife Karen Paul is the other partner) says he needs a business executive to manage the rapidly growing T-shirt, gifts, video and greenhouse mini-empire.

"I may be business-oriented," says Mr. Paul, "but I'm not business-educated."

Indeed he's not. After graduating from Gould Academy in 1965 the West Bethel native went on to Southern Maine Vocational-Technical Institute, graduating with an associate degree before joining IBM Corp. in Cambridge where he worked as a service representative on IBM machines in use at M.I.T.

It was not until he took an adult ed course in graphic arts from David Tripp at Telstar, however, that he began to envision the possibilities of turning T-shirt printing into a profitable business.

"Before I even got finished with the class, all of a sudden it was turning into a business," he recalls, saying he was filling orders as fast as he could for friends.

The real beginning of the T-shirt business probably dates from 1978, after Jim Austin designed the fat and lazy raccoon that is now known as The Original Maine Coon. Mr. Paul recalls that he wasn't particularly taken by the clawed critter, but says his wife and partner, Karen, thought it had the right combination of lovableness and wildness.

The rest is history. With help from a wholesaler in Bridgton and from The Bethel Savings Bank, the coon tees took off. In 1979—the second full year of production of the shirts—sales had already outstripped sales in the greenhouse business, which he and Karen had started in 1974, by 10 to one.

Two years ago, to provide a local outlet for the T-shirts and other gift items, Groan & McGurn opened the Tourist Trap on Rte. 2, in a building that had belonged to Mr. Paul's parents.

Not long thereafter, the couple opened a seasonal Tourist Trap in Boothbay Harbor, and soon after that added video to the West Bethel outlet.

This year, the expanding company opened yet another Tourist Trap on Rte. 2 in Gorham, N. H., and finally, last month, another outlet in downtown Bethel, in the Edelweiss building.

What's next?

Possibly more Tourist Traps, in Laconia, N. H., and Weirs Beach, N. H., placed in convenience stores, says Mr. Paul.

But simply selling T-shirts and renting video tapes doesn't appeal to the creative Mr. Paul. He already is beginning to market plant dusters and has on the drawing board a portable printing shop.

"They'll go to where it's warm enough so that people are wearing T-shirts and sweatshirts, and start printing," he envisions. "Someday we may franchise (the operation)," he says.

With all these ideas running through his head, Mr. Paul emphasizes that he really wants to get someone in to handle management. "I would be the head whizbang (idea man)," he says.

Starting as a mom and pop operation with the opening of the greenhouse business in 1974, Groan & McGurn now employs 17 people on a seasonal basis, both full-and part-time. That size staff entails management problems in itself, admits Mr. Paul, who also helps manage the four kids (Aaron, 7, Eva, 5, Sarah, 3, and Stephen, 1) that he and Karen have had over the years.

The family also has a 12-year-old Siamese cat—Titus Groan—one of the namesakes of the business. And McGurn? There have been three Ernie McGurn's—all female Siamese. All of them came to a bad end trying to cross Rte. 2 from the Tourist Trap to the family home.

STORE MANAGER Joanie Deegan and Groan & McGurn owner Eric Paul stand proudly before the newest outlet of the rapidly expanding T-shirt and video business. This latest store is at 1 Main Street in Bethel, alongside Edelweiss Country Store.

NOTES FROM WOODSTOCK HISTORICAL SOCIETY

This week we offer the following illuminating quote on history:

"Mankind is always more or less storm-tossed; and history is the sextant and compass of states which, tossed by wind and current, would be lost in confusion if they could not fix their position. It enables communties to grasp their relationship with the past, and to chart on general lines their immediate forward course. It does more. By giving peoples a worth, it confers upon them both a consciousness of their unity, and a feeling of the importance of human achievement. History is more than a mere guide to nations. It is first a creator of nations, and after that, their inspirer. Without it this world, a brilliant arena of human action canopied by fretted fire, would indeed become stale, flat, and unprofitable, a congregation of pestilent vapors. . . Were history as nearly static as some branches of learning it would be a drab affair; but it is alive in every sense. It is most of all alive in this that it is constantly being reborn like a phoenix from its own ashes. As mankind lengthens its record, perspectives steadily change. The lenses through which we look at the past must be refocused from generation to generation. What seemed wisdom to our fathers is often folly to us; what is intensely dramatic to our age may seem naive or banal to the next. While the best history is perdurable, there is a sense in which every generation needs to have history rewritten anew for it. The history written in any age insensibly bodies forth the form and spirit of that age. . . . History in its proteam forms touches the realm of ideas at more points than any other study." Allan Nevins.

The next Society program will be on Bird Hill. Mansfield Packard will speak. Ruby Emery will also have a presentation.

ry Roshto hit for nine points in that game (four field goals and one free throw).

In the Carrabec game, the younger Haines had 10, while older brother Bernie had eight. Brandon Salway led the Rebel shooters in the game with 14 (six field goals and two free throws).

The Rebels led Carrabec in that game throughout the first quarter, ending the marker up by 12-11. Carrabec began finding the range in the second quarter, going into the locker room at half-time ahead 30-23. In the third quarter disaster struck and Carrabec scored 27 points to Telstar's eight. The fourth quarter was more of the same, and the game ended 80-47.

Coach Caddigan said he'll be stressing shooting drills before Saturday's game at Sacopee.

The girls, still riding high on the basis of their good showing in the Gorham Christmas tourney, will be on Sacopee's court Friday.

The girls eliminated Hillsborough-Deering in the preliminary round, 37-29, shutting out the Hillcats in the third quarter. Penny York had 11 points, Donna Dorey 10 and Traci Higgins nine.

Coach Jim Lunney said afterwards, "I was pleased with our defense. The 1-3-1 zone we use is working pretty well."

On the other hand, the coach thought the offense could have been more productive. "We need to put up more shots (and) we've got to get more people shooting more."

The tournament championship game against Gorham last Saturday saw the girls go down to defeat 42-27, but not before they pulled within five points (25-20) early in the third quarter. This was the same Gorham that had run all over the Rebels in the season-opening scrimmage, so the loss was not unexpected, whereas the ability to fight back was gratifying. "I think the girls were pleased overall," the coach said. He added, "One thing that hurt us, we were playing without six of our girls."

Filling in for the injured and missing were a number of JVs, and Coach Lunney was pleased with their performance, especially the play of Lynn Seames, who rotated with Traci Higgins. "I'm pretty sure I'll keep her on the varsity," he said of Seames.

The girls stand at 2-7 going into Friday's Sacopee game.

— Louise Loring, Corres. —

Hear ye! Hear ye! There is no easy way to keep any New Year's resolution — let alone drop 50 pounds, quit smoking, be a dutiful wife, and home maker, write a weekly column and keep smiling.

So this week with your permission I shall tell you the 12 that I have proposed for myself—with the hope that I shall be too abashed having told the world not to at least try to apply myself. I'm game if you are.

(Incidently they are also posted on my refrigerator.)

1. Thou shalt set no sweets before Thee.
2. Thou shalt not create any tempting dishes or likenesses thereof.
3. Thou shalt not moan and groan when it is exercise time.
4. Thou shalt leave the table hungry.
5. Thou shalt not take Thy spouses name in vain as he goes back for seconds.
6. Thou shalt remember that everyday is diet day and keep it Holy.
7. Thou shalt honor other people's rights to a decent meal.
8. Thou shalt not kill with nasty looks when others snack.
9. Thou shalt not commit adultery with any tempting morsel, however beautifully packaged.
10. Thou shalt not steal any leftovers from: A. other people's plates; B. the refrigerator; C. or clean out any cooking bowls or icing dishes.

Thou shalt not covet other people's figures as you work on your own.

And if that's not enough—don't buy any cigarettes (save the money for a bikini), never search for stray butts, and be sure not to seat thyself near a chainsmoker.

Safety Tip of the Week:

During the winter months, it is wise to keep an extra ear tuned to the local weather. Not all weathermen seem to predict accurately what the weather may be. But they usually warn when upcoming storms are a possibility. Before heading out in potentially bad weather, have the car in shape, battery working well, heater working well, starter working, plenty of window washer fluid, good wiper blades, etc. Stock up some sand, shovels, flares, in the trunk. And have warm cold-weather clothing for yourself and all passengers. A few minutes of precaution may make a big difference in the long run, if caught in a storm.

Sent in by Viva Whitman:

A cloudy Saturday and time to get something written for the paper if I can find the energy. I think they must have kept a lot of it at the hospital when I came home as I don't have as much as I seem to need. Either that, or I am just getting plain lazy. I thought that once I got home to some of Russell's good cooking that I'd gain back my strength real fast, but it hasn't worked that way at all. He must be leaving out some of those good ingredients that I need so badly. However, I am better than I was a week ago.

Lawrence and Grace had their family Christmas celebration last Sunday, the 23rd and Russell and I went up to join them. I wondered if I could get my feet to climb the stairs from their basement to the kitchen floor, but finally made it and just sat and rested. It's funny how heavy one's feet and legs can get from being sick. Russell thought it would be the shortest route for me to go that way, but the stairs were quite a task to climb. We had a lovely supper of turkey and vegetables as well as some of Grace's nice oyster stew and plenty of goodies to fill any empty spots left. All seem to be good cooks and all of the family have good appetites and so did the boys friends and others who came. There must have been at least 27 of us there. The Christmas tree was loaded with gifts and the home decorated so prettily for the festivities. We were all used real good by Santa at that tree and had a jolly time with the family. When I good tired and felt the need to get home, it wasn't far to travel and made it without any mishaps. Got several spools of crochet cotton for Christmas so I can keep out of mischief for a while if I get the ambition to use what I got.

Russell and I had spent one day making some of our zucchini, carrot bread for gifts for the different families. That seemed the easiest and I had to take the easy way out. All seemed delighted to get the bread and Cindy, who was showing a new engagement ring, decided her fiance liked it and said he had eaten half of the loaf before we left to come home. We were glad to meet him and enjoyed talking with him. We wish them the best and hope they will have a happy future together.

Two of the grandsons didn't get home, but all the rest of the family were there. One grandson, Tommy, who is in the Navy lives with his wife and son in South Carolina and the other grandson, Joe, lives in Florida. We hope they enjoyed a good Christmas even though they weren't at home with the rest of the clan. They were missed and hope they know it.

Monday was a busy day here as we were getting ready for Christmas with some of my family. Wynona and Courtney came up and Nonie got the turkey stuffed and ready to cook for me. She knew I didn't have the ambition and also wanted to leave Courtney to go to bed early as they were all spending the night here with Russell and I. She made herself very useful and I can tell you that those big hugs I got from Courtney helped me feel a lot better. She is such a good hugger and loves Nana as much as I love her. Later in the afternoon, Nonie went back to Lewiston to help Michael in the store and get things loaded into the car prepared to come and spend the night. They went to the Second Congregational Church for the Christmas program at 11:00, so didn't get back here to unload the car and get to bed until after midnight. It is a wonder we didn't see Santa where we were up so late. I had had quite a talk with Courtney about Santa coming and putting lots of gifts under the tree while she slept. She isn't quite as old as she might be to understand, but if you could have seen her eyes on Christmas morning, you would have seen that she remembered what we had talked about.

We opened gifts that were in our stockings, though I don't know why Santa keeps putting some on for Russell and I, but then we got ready and went to Wendall's on the Waterford Road in Norway for a tree and breakfast. I told them that I looked like I had been dragged thru a knot hole, but had a good time even though I was so tired I could hardly go. We came back to the trailer and got things going for lunch and opened gifts here. None of us were too bright and shining as we were all too tired. After a bountiful lunch, all of us except Russell, took a nice long nap and that was one of the best parts of the day. I was so tired and so were the rest. Tried to get Russell to rest, but he wouldn't until he had done the dishes. Nonie, Mike and Courtney left in the late afternoon with their load of gifts and we all decided we had had a real nice Christmas. It was nice for me to be home with my family and to know that they cared enough to come and help me after being in the hospital.

I still get tired very easily, but am not coughing my head off and choking as I did. I rattle some in my chest and guess I probably will continue to for some time, but didn't realize just how sick I was, myself. Expected to be back doing lots of things by now, but find I still have to take it easy. I work a little and rest a little. Don't dare get out into lots of cold air yet as it affects my lungs. That good old formaldehyde did a good job on me last year and I would never urge any one to buy a trailer again. The only kind that is guaranteed not to have formaldehyde is the Zimmer, so if you are think of getting one, go see them instead of the others.

My doctors still thought there must be formaldehyde in the home, even after all the painting, taking out the carpet putting in an air exchanger and all, so we had State come and test again. We couldn't believe that there could be any left as we had done all we could think of do ng to get rid of it, but in the living room area, the test was .003 PPM, parts per million, and in my bedroom area, the test showed .005 PPM.

We couldn't believe it when we read it. That is a small amount but when you have been as sick as I was all last year from the darn stuff, it doesn't take much and I was very allergic to it. If I had the money to do what I would like to do, I would like to see all the trailers that are made make restitution to the people who have contracted bronchitis, asthma and all the other ailments that the formaldehyde can cause. I am told they are now putting up papers in the trailers saying that there may be formaldehyde that can be injurious to one's health and that is a start, but what about those of us who weren't warned about it and have to suffer for the rest of our lives? We thought we were doing the right thing and no one told us anything about formaldehyde. I think the companies should be made to pay and pay dearly. One's health is worth a lot and when it is taken because of something like this, it isn't a funny thing at all. I'd like to have some of them have the coughing spells I have had and the burning that I have left in my lungs. They wouldn't be laughing, I can tell you that. The doctor says chronic bronchitis and another says there is asthma involved because of the mess. All I know is that I hope what I have had to say about formaldehyde helps some one else keep from getting into it and geting sick.

On that note, I will say that I hope all you nice folks out there have a good and prosperous New Year. If the Good Lord is willing, I hope my health will improve also, but I won't look for miracles until they happen. I have had too many disappointments healthwise. Happy New Year to all and a year of Health.

— Mrs. Celista Morgan, Corres. —

On this December afternoon only a short time remains in 1984. To most of us the year has brought some gladness and some sadness.

At the beginning of this week just closing the world joined in the festival of hope, peace, and faith amidst the winter dark. There were festivities, lights, greens, and prayers. The ceremonies were many and differed, as to countries.

There were thoughts of the night hills, and a little town, the stable and the Child's birth. Thus the beginning. We put with this the shepherds out on the hills, the angel and how they came to the stable. So we have the story we cherish.

Like blankets of new fallen snow the meaning of Christmas covered the earth once again. Our thoughts reached out with Love, Faith, and Service abroad in this land.

As I write this the day has been warm and spring-like.

I went down the road and I heard the water trickle softly for the first time in many days.

The hills sparkled with ice and water drops. I stopped to look and saw a speck of a white cloud come close then mingle with another. A breeze came and brushed them together against the blue.

The mountains stood dipped in pearl, a lovely sight whether in pearls, leaf, or blossom; always the picture will stay with me, as a jewlel on velvet.

The harsh call of the raven came from across the pond and the whine of a chain saw broke the stillness.

Sumac growth always catches my eye. Today it seemed brilliant. As I watched a cloud descended on it; birds like grains of wheat falling from the sky. They chatted among the scarlet flowers, then flung themselves into the sky.

These were the common sumac which illuminates our hillsides every autumn with masses of flame-like color and is known as the Staghorn Sumac. Some would like to decorate with its brilliant sprays, but are deterred from handling them by the fear of being poisoned, not knowing that one glance at the crimson fruit-plumes should reassure them, as the poisonous sumacs are white fruited. These tossing pyramidial fruit-fruit-clusters at first appear to explain the common title of staghorn sumac. It is not until the foliage has disappeared, and the forked branches are displayed in all their nakedness, that we feel that these must be the feature in which the common name originated.

The poisonous sumac flowers in June and can be distinguished by the slender flower-clusters which grow from the axils of the leaves. I have seen seen very few around here.

Going back home I looked at the icicles which decorated the ledges.

Steel-blue shadows filled the hollows of the snow.

I knew that I would not walk this way again in 1984 but I look forward to the new year and I wish all my readers a happy 1985.

WEST PARIS

West Paris Selectman Hugo Heikkinen warned residents last year that a solution would have to be found to the dump problem because the present site was full and the DEP had turned thumbs down on a new site in North Paris because the soil was not acceptable. At the Board of Selectmen meeting last Thursday, Mr. Heikkinen estimated it would cost about $25,000 a year to lease dumpsters and pay for hauling the trash to Auburn, plus a tipping fee payable to the City of Auburn. The question before the special town meeting voters will not ask for any appropriation, he said. Voters will simply be asked to approve the concept of taking the trash to Auburn, so if that city approves, the selectmen can institute the new system right away. Mr. Morrison said he might have an answer for the request in June.

Selectman Phillip Hyam warned, "We're at the edge of the cliff. I really don't think we can get another year (out of the present dump)."

Selectman Gordon Doughty also supported the measure on the special town meeting warrant: "This really is not the answer (for a long-term solution), but at least it gets it out of our town." The town produces about 15 tons of trash every other week.

The special town meeting will convene at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 14, in the fire station.
